Local Factory Turns Out 6,000 Cans A Day Containers Made By United Can Co. y Add Final Touch of Superiority To Newfoundland Product

A manufacturing plant that occupies an important place amongst local industries, but which is little heard of is that of the United Can Manufacturing Co. Ltd., whose factory on Hamilton Street is a veritable hive of activity.

An Advocate reporter paid a visit to this factory on Thursday with Mr. R. A. Templeton, the Managing Director of the company and for half an hour or more watched the complete staff of a dozen men and girls turn out lobster and salmon tins at the rate of seven hundred and fifty an hour.

The plant is one of the most up-to-date to be found anywhere in that it is equipped with the latest can-making machines, operated by capable hands and turning out an article that has no superior in that line either here or elsewhere.

Every bit of work, from the uncut sheet of tin to the finished can is done by machinery, and every can is made with the utmost durability. In this instance, at any rate, there is absolute proof that the machine made article is far above that made by hand in point of strength and also, as is to be expected, in point of neatness of finish.

WELL EQUIPPED PLANT

The motive power used at the United Can Co.'s factory is electricity but gas is also installed for heating

Newfoundland Loan Floated Successfully Gets 102 3-4 in N. York Funds

TORONTO, March 17.—A syndicate comprising the Dominion Securities, Ltd., Toronto, Dillon Rand & Co., New York and Lee Higginson, of Boston, have acquired the six million-bond issue of the Newfoundland Government, carrying five and a half per cent. for twenty years payable in New York funds. The price paid was 98.763, the cost to the ancient colony being 5.59 per cent. on New York basis. Figuring cost in Canadian dollars at four per cent. discount the cost works out at about 5.25 and the price approximately 102 3/4.

purposes, such as soldering, drying compressed margin of the tin. A remarkable feature of the machine is the similarity of movement in the machinery used in the making of the soldering operation as performed by cans and every one of these is the machine itself and that done by most modern of its kind in use at hand. So perfectly are the cans side the present time. NAME STAMPED ON CANS

The bottoms and covers for the the edges turned for fitting perfectly cans are cut and shaped, in what is into the bottoms, an operation which known as the press, a machine which is performed by the most complicated not only cuts these parts from the and the latest installed piece of ma- sheet of metal, but shapes it, turns the edges and stamps thereon an in- double seamer from which the can scription telling the consumer that comes out ready for use. It is in this the product which the can contains machine that the bottoms are fitted by the way, is a most important detail on this particular process that the particularly in relation to our fish strength of the can depends.

A CONVINCING TEST

A list was made at the factory of the relative strength of the machine fitted and hand soldered covers. A tin with the machine affixed bot- tom was taken and a quantity of water placed in it after which the top try. It will be thus seen that the was soldered in by hand and the tin cans made by the United Can Co. placed on a heater. It was found that the The sides of the tins are shaped in what is known as the lining machine which cuts eight tins at a time, this number being then put in the curlier which shapes them to the required size.

RUBBER FILLING IS USED

Attached to the press in which the covers are cut is a machine, quite simple in appearance, but performing an important part of the general operation, called the curlier. In this the edges of the bottoms and covers are curled or turned in, forming a groove into which the ends of the body of the can are fitted. To give the can greater strength the bottoms are transferred from the curlier to the other machine which fills the grooves and above referred to with a liquid rubber compound. They are then put into a drier for the purpose of solidifying this rubber so that when this process is completed, a rubber fitting has been formed which obviates the possibility of leaks and renders the tin tight more solid.

SOLDERING STRONGLY DONE

One of the most interesting as well as most important operations in the whole process of the manufacture of the cans is that of the soldering of the bodies or side-seaming as it is when wanted. The board for these called. The whole thing is done by machinery and the strength with which the edges are held together, material for 1922 cases is now cut. Before being lapped, there is applied to the edges a flux which helps the insertion of the solder between the the way of tinning local products.

Russian Horrors

LONDON, March 17.—The Labor Party to-day announced that Arthur Henderson had received telegrams from the party's Russian foreign delegation alleging that the Soviet government was preparing to renew its policy of terrorism against the Social Revolutionary Party. According to the telegram the leaders of the Russian Socialist Party, who have been imprisoned three years, will be tried for treason March 20 and under cover of the trial the Communist Party intends to conceal its real purpose which is alleged to be to settle accounts with its political enemies. An appeal is made for immediate and resolute intervention on the part of Socialists throughout the world. Mr. Henderson has telegraphed Communist leaders exposing alarm and strongly urging that no injury be done to these political prisoners. The Berlin party has also made urgent representations to the third international.

Divided Increase

NEW YORK, March 17.—The Bank of England, which has distributed a five per cent. dividend semi-annually since 1914, has increased the rate to six per cent., a cablegram to a financial agency here said to-day. The increased dividend was an agreeable surprise to international bankers. Even those with influential London connections seemed to have no intimation that such action was impending. The larger disbursements coming so soon after reduction of discount rate was accepted here as proof of Great Britain's steady recovery to normal or pre-war conditions.

Some time of turnip-tops were put up when these delectable "greens" were in season. They were opened in February and tried out. The verdict of all who used them was that they were "as fresh as the day they were tinned." The presence in our midst of a plant that can turn out tins of any size required for any purpose should be an incentive to greater endeavour in the field of preserving by this means, and no doubt this will be one of the results of the enterprise of this Company.

As far as present requirements for cans are concerned, it is certain that packers of fish products in this country cannot do better, than to use the tins made by the United Can Mfg. Co. In this connection we refer our port packers to the big prize offer of the Company advertised in this issue.

AN APPEAL

There are 400 people in St. John's and 459 in the out-harbors who owe me money for the last two years.

I sent out over 700 letters within the last ten days asking for payment. Some responded, but very few; more, than my profit for the last two years is still owed me. My whole capital is out on credit and it is impossible to do business when we cannot get paid within a reasonable time. I have my everyday demands to meet to keep up stock and pay wages. I give out my goods freely, and intend to do so; but I want payment within a reasonable time, but when the time goes into one, two and three years, it is out of all reason; and I must take this appeal to those who are inclined to pay me, so I can continue business. If they cannot pay me all at once, let me have what they can.

Their extreme attention to this appeal will greatly oblige.

Wages Will Be Lower

REGINA, Sask., March 14—In anticipation that between 3,000 and 3,500 men will be required for seeding operations on the farms in Saskatchewan, the bureau of labor is laying its plans to provide that amount of help for the farmers this coming season. It is announced here. The estimated number of men required is about the average of the past few years.

At a recent convention of labor bureau officials the situation with respect to women help was also thoroughly canvassed by the women in charge of this branch of the work at the various depots of the province. It was the consensus of opinion that the demand for girls and women on the farms will be about the same as last year, but that the prevailing wages would be lower. Last year, domestics from the old country were quoted $30 a month, but this year it is the intention to offer $25.

A Mrs. Smith (as good a name as any) engaged a new housemaid, and was annoyed to find that the girl persisted in addressing her as "Mrs. Smith." She remonstrated, and suggested that she should address her in the same way as the other maids did.

"Well," said the girl, thoughtfully, "I can't call you mam or mum; I always call mother that. But I don't mind calling you auntie if you like."

Her Reward OR Love's Recompense

CHAPTER XXXIX.
Audrey's Recompense.

Then she proceeded to relate all those events, which we already know, connected with her adoption of Rich, and their life since leaving her country home.

"It is the most wonderful story I ever heard," Arthur Halstead said, when she had concluded. "What a wretched, revengeful creature that woman must have been! And then to think that my child should have fallen into your hands to be reared and educated! That is more astonishing than all else!"

Then turn to Rich, he continued, while a fond smile illumined his fine face:

"Richmond, my boy, are you prepared to acknowledge your father?" Rich was moved to his very soul's depths at the discovery that he was the son of this noble man—that he could claim an honorable birth—an untarnished name.

Then, as if he felt that he must not appear to renounce his allegiance to her whom he owned so much, he put out his other hand and grasped Audrey's.

Arthur Halstead's face lightened at this act. "Audrey," he said, earnestly, "this but serves to strengthen the bond between us—and how much I owe you for what you have made my boy!"

"I owe Rich a great deal for the comfort that he has been to me," Miss Waldemar responded, tremulously. "He has been nothing but a blessing to me from the first; and when I lost my property, you have no idea how manfully he went to work to take care of me."

"Ah! but he must have had wise training, or he would never have been what he is," Mr. Halstead returned. "I tremble when I think what might have been if he had been reared by that woman; while I am bound to confess that you have done far better by him than even his own mother could have done, with her poor health, though she loved him most tenderly, and his supposed horrible fate nearly killed her."

"It must have been very hard for you both," Rich said, sadly, and sighing as he remembered that wistful, yearning expression in his mother's eyes. "But," he added, "Aunt Audrey has given me the wisest of training; she has been a mother indeed to me, and I believe it would hardly be possible for me to love any one more than I love her."

"But, Arthur, you did not tell me that you had ever had a son, when I inquired for your family," Audrey observed.

"No; I told you that I had no children. That was always my reply when any one questioned me regarding my family. It was easier to say that than to explain that I had lost my boy, and then have to go over the dreadful story in detail."

"Your grandfather Halstead named you, Rich," he said, turning to the young man. "He did not exactly like his own, which was Richard, and yet he wanted you to have something that sounded as near like it as possible, so compromised the matter, and called you Richmond."

"It is the nicer name, I think," said Audrey; "but, Arthur, is it not a little singular that you should have trusted Margaret Fox so fully? She must have been a strange character."

"I do not know," he returned, thoughtfully. "I never knew anything of her unhappy and remarkable affection for me until you told it this evening. Probably I thought it too absurd to mention, and she always conducted herself with the utmost decorum whenever she was in my presence. If I had known of it I should have insisted upon a change of nurses at once. But I am too grateful at this present moment, to cherish any revengeful feelings toward the poor dying woman, altho' with a tremble in his voice, she has deprived me, for long years of his love, and of the pleasure of watching him develop day by day and year by year."

"It was a dreadful thing," sighed Audrey, "and yet good has grown out of it—at least to me. This is my recompense for all the trials and sorrows of the past—that I can restore your son to you, and a worthy son, too, of a noble father. I have often wondered why our lives were so divided, why each was doomed to go a different way. But there was a purpose in it—do you not see? And is not the reward a wonderful one?"

"I suppose we should regard it in that way," returned the gentleman, thoughtfully. "However, we will thank fully accept our present blessings, and not mar them by vainly regretting the past. But Rich is going to reap some benefit from this long waiting, as well as we. How will it suit you, young man, to have the control of a fine fortune from this time on?" he concluded, turning with a look of pride on his son.

"A fortune!" Rich repeated, in a surprised tone. "Yes. Your mother was quite an heiress at the time of her marriage, and her property has been accumulating ever since, as she was too feeble to enjoy spending money very much, and never even used the whole of her yearly income," explained Mr. Halstead.

"A competence, is what I have been hoping to achieve by close attention to business," Rich replied, gravely; "but a fortune, however large, seems of very little moment to me just now, compared to the fact that I have found you—father."

"Bless you, my son! That last is the sweetest word that I have heard this many a year," said Mr. Halstead, heartily. "God grant that we may live long to enjoy this renewed friendship."

"This Margaret Fox," Audrey said, when, after a time, they had all become a little more composed "seemed to be quite anxious regarding her nephew. She says he was not always unkind to her, though he possessed something of her own passionate, revengeful disposition. She says he was her only dependence, and that he suddenly disappeared last winter,

The extreme depression and discouragement which comes over one at times is the most alarming symptom of nervous exhaustion.

Mrs. Geo. T. Tinley, Albert, N.B., writes:—

"A friend advised the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and I can truly testify today to the great benefits received. There was a marked change before I had finished the second box and when I had used a dozen boxes my nerves were thoroughly restored and I was entirely relieved of those terrible feelings I used to have. there be any serious objection to exchanging the name of Waldemar for that of Halstead?"

And Miss Waldemar, thinking only of those two dear young people, very innocently replied:

"I am sure, Rich, I cannot conceive of any."

The burst of laughter from both gentlemen which greeted this admission made her conscious of the jest perpetrated at her expense, and a beautiful blush suffused her face. But, nothing daunted, she pursued, with a defiant little toss of her shape ly head, and a shy glance at Mr. Halstead:

"Well, if there is any doubt upon the subject, and she chooses to wait long enough, perhaps I will prove my position."

"I think I shall retain both names," Rich said, gravely after a moment of thought, "I have become deeply attached to your name, Aunt Audrey, short time ago!—how very fortunate that this discovery was made before the tenth."

"True; it would have made matters a trifle awkward, I confess," said Mr. Halstead, with an amused laugh.

The next morning that gentleman himself visited Bellevue Hospital and had an interview with Margaret Fox, recognizing her at once; and, questioning her further regarding her confession, he was fully satisfied with the truth of it and that he had indeed found his son.

CHAPTER XL

The Union of Hearts.

Miss Waldemar, Rich, and his father returned to Linnell the third day after their arrival in New York, and they received a most cordial welcome from every member of the family.

All were glad to have the suspense ended, for they had experienced no small amount of curiosity concerning the important and mysterious business which had called Audrey on suddenly to New York.

Her story, when she related it, created considerable excitement and surprise, while Rich was heartily congratulated upon the happiness which Margaret Fox's revelation had brought to him, and also upon his future brilliant prospects.

In the final period each team got a goal, Muir scoring for St. Bon's and Coultais doing the needful for the Saints. A feature of the game was the goal tending of Halley, of St. Bon's who played his best game for the season.

Repudiates DeValera

BOSTON, March 17.—The leadership of De Valera was repudiated and his policy of external association with the British Empire was condemned in a resolution passed last night at a meeting of the Friends of Irish Freedom at their St. Patrick's Day dinner. Loyal support was pledged to the Provisional government of Ireland under the leadership of Collins and Griffith.

SHOULD NOT BE MONUMENTAL

Literary Institute Believes That National Memorial Should be Utilitarian.

Should the national war memorial to be erected by Newfoundland be strictly monumental, or should it be utilitarian? The latter, in the opinion of the Methodist College Literary Institute, which debated the subject at Thursday night's session. The utilitarian idea should be represented by a national model school, where teachers could be trained and sent broadcast throughout the country to teach the children of the country.

The leaders of the debate were: William White, Harold Mitchell and H. Wyatt; and negative, H. E. Cowan, H. Butt and C. F. Garland. From the floor the following speakers took part—Joseph Moore, P. H. Cowan, Thos. Soper, Wilson Clarke, Fred Edgescombe, Fred Moore, Rev. L. Curtis, Alan Moore, E. Bursey, R. Herder and J. R. Smallwood. By a large majority the affirmative carried the day.

Affirmative Argument.
The best form of memorial to the dead was something useful to the living, argued the affirmative. Not something spectacular, but something useful was needed. The idea of collecting fifty thousand dollars or more from a poor people and putting it into inanimate bronze or marble was wrong, it was pagan and vulgar. Well enough for communities which already had many and sufficient public buildings and institutions to erect beautiful monuments. Communities like our own needed something useful, and at the same time monumental. The idea of having a memorial that was strictly monumental, and not at all utilitarian was wrong. A memorial, and at the same time monumental or ornamental.

While many cities in other countries had used the monumental idea to put up memorials, four hundred cities at least in United States had agreed to erect utilitarian memorials in the shape of public and community buildings. The town of Leeds, England, had built a big wing to a hospital as its memorial. "Service," not appearance, was the keynote of the day.

Negative Argument.
The negative side agreed with the affirmative as to the need for education and educational facilities in Newfoundland, but believed that they

Order In South Africa

JOHANNESBURG, March 18.—Order has been completely restored in South Africa. The police declare they have voluminous evidence showing that a Bolshevik plot was responsible for the revolutionary outbreak. The revelation will be "astounding," they assert. A government official declared to-night that prisoners exceeded six thousand, and that those among them responsible for outrages would be dealt with. The railway men have resumed work.

"Diamond Dyes" add years of wear to worn, faded skirts, waists, coats, stockings, sweaters, coverings, hangings, draperies, everything. Every package contains directions so simple any woman can put new, rich, fadeless colors into her worn garments or draperies even if she has never dyed before. Just buy Diamond Dyes—no other kind—then your material will come out right because Diamond Dyes are guaranteed not to streak, spot, fade, or run. Tell your druggist whether the material you wish to dye is wool or silk, or whether it is linen, cotton or mixed goods.

ST. JOHN'S, NEWFOUNDLAND, SATURDAY, MARCH 18th., 1922

The Newfoundland Loan

We congratulate the Government upon the splendid price obtained for the Loan which has been floated during the past few days. To obtain 1.023/4 in New York for our Bonds is something we should pride ourselves upon, and it is a good augury that the good old ship "Newfoundland" is very far from being on the rocks financially. We again heartily congratulate all concerned on this successful outcome.

The Lobster Competition

We direct attention to-day to the advertisement on this page and the articles on this page and page 1 in reference thereto. The offer is a generous one, and the whole subject makes very interesting reading. We commend the United Can Co. for its enterprise in arousing such a practical interest in this important industry.

THE ART OF CANNING!

The art of canning came into use in 1814 when Napoleon offered a prize for the solution of the problem of how to preserve food for his armies. The prize was won by Nicholas Appert, who experimented and became master of the art as we know it now, indeed it is said he was so expert as to be able to put up eggs in such a way that they could not be distinguished from the genuinely fresh ones. If this is correct the knowledge has since been lost. In canning food products we must accomplish two things: 1st. To remove all the air from a can, and to seal it in such a way as to prevent any air getting in. 2nd. To heat the contents to such a degree that all microbes will be killed.

It is very necessary for the success of the packer that exceedingly great care be taken to have everything in connection with the process absolutely clean, so much so, that most persons, who do not know the real necessity for this, are apt to think that it is carried too far. But this cannot be, as everything should not only be clean but sterilized. It is only in this way that success can be attained.

In Newfoundland with its long winter and springs, we depend a great deal upon canned food, as it is the only means we can adopt by which we can obtain the necessary elements to satisfy our bodily needs and maintain perfect health. Green foods, fruits, vegetables and fresh meats and fish are essential to physical well being, and unfortunately in the lives of many of our people there is either a feast or a famine of these commodities, and very little effort is made to preserve our food products except by salting, pickling, etc., which in a large measure destroys their value.

Preserving by canning has become popular because of the wonderful variety of food it puts within reach of everyone. The shelves of city grocery shops are filled with canned goods of every description, and from every country. Milk from Canada and Switzerland, fruit from Spain, Italy, California. Meats from South America, Australia. Jams, Biscuits and Confectionery from England and Scotland. Vegetables from United States. Sardines from Norway. Salmon from the Pacific. Herrings from Scotland. Tea from India and China. Pineapple from Malay Straits. Coffee from Brazil. Hardly a civilized country unrepresented, scarcely a product that is not protected by the universal CAN.

Home canning is an economy which should be encouraged. Methods are so simple, that anyone can follow directions and obtain good results. For the benefit of those interested a number of recipes for the successful canning of local food products are given. The Advocate would welcome a discussion of any difficult problems and will answer any questions on the subject, to the best of our ability.

GENERAL DIRECTIONS

There are two kinds of cans used in Newfoundland:

1st. ORDINARY CANS.—These cans have a cover which fits inside the sides of the can and has to be soldered in by hand. This style has to be closed and bolted before it has the air blown off, and the air is let out by punching a hole in the side, which hole is stopped again before the can becomes cold. The use of these cans requires a little experience with a soldering iron, but anyone can become quite expert with a little practice. The principal thing to remember is keep your copper clean and HOT.

2nd. SANITARY CANS.—So called because these cans are made without the use of solder, and flux or acid is not required, and so the manufacture is cleaner and more sanitary. The great advantage of these cans lies in the fact that they are closed by the use of a machine. These are of various designs and a quite serviceable one can be had for $40.00. The use of a machine for closing permits of the can being steamed before it is sealed, thus avoiding the necessity of punching and blowing off, and is a great saver of time and labour, particularly in factories where large quantities are handled. Machines capable of closing 100 cans a minute are obtainable and in use in Newfoundland. Sanitary cans can be processed exactly the same way as ordinary cans; but the fullest advantage can only be obtained when a steam tank is used instead of an open bath.

The smaller machines are quite simple and can be used by even a child with perfect results. In U. S. A. nearly every farmer's wife owns and uses one.

As the Ordinary cans are the more generally used, our recipes are all given for processing in the ordinary open bath or boiler.

There are some general rules which apply to the canning of all products which should be well to remember.

1st. Before putting the products in the cans, each can should be thoroughly washed with warm water.

2nd. When sealing the cover on the can too much solder should not be used, as it makes the cans unsightly. 45 1-lb. flat cans can be sealed with three quarters lb. of solder.

3rd. Soldering iron should be kept clean, free from soot and frequently tinned. To tin, dip the hot iron in soldering flux and cover point with solder. Occasionally the iron may have to be touched up with a file or coarse rasp, usually a pointed copper weighing about 1 1/2 lbs. is found to be more satisfactory.

5th. When cans are being bathed, the length of time should not be taken from the time the cans are put into the bath, but from the time the water begins to boil when the cans are in. Care should be taken to keep the water boiling the entire time. When the can is being blown off it is necessary that free exit be given the steam and air contained in the can, and if the blow hole should become stopped by the contents of the can it should be reopened or if necessary a new hole made. As soon as the steam is exhausted the hole should be stopped by soldering, before the cans become cold. When bathing all cans should be ready to be put into the boiler at the same time, so that they will have an equal length of time in the bath, and thus uniform results obtained.

6th. When packing in 2 lb. cans the length of time in the bath should be increased by 30 minutes as the larger the can is, the longer is necessary to heat the contents. The purposes of the bath is to expell all the air and to heat the contents of the can to such a degree that the temperature of the contents will be raised to 180 degrees Fahrenheit. The causes of blown tins is usually through not being bathed long enough.

7th. Some manufacturers make a practice of pricking the can twice. This is not necessary as the pressure will not be more than 8 lbs and our cans will stand a pressure of 40 lbs. without bursting.

8th. In Newfoundland as a general rule very little care is taken to clean the cans after they have been bathed. This takes away from the market value and is a very grave fault. The cans should be cleaned immediately after they have been bathed, and when packing food, such as Salmon where a certain amount of grease collects, and it will be found advantageous to clean in hot water with some lye added, and after this the can should be put through clear fresh water and thoroughly dried before being packed in casks. Some packers find it convenient to use cloths slightly moistened with sweet oil and dipped in ordinary flour. This treatment does not scratch the tinplate and usually gives a lasting polish. Packers should always remember to protect the product they are canning from flies and excessive heat before packing. In the summer time all fish products, etc., should be canned the day they are received.

LOBSTERS.

LOBSTERS should be boiled alive and packed the day they are boiled. The tails are put into the bottom of the can and coiled around, the body meat is packed in the centre of the can and claws put on top. The meat should be thoroughly drained before it is placed in the can and no liquid should be added. A pinch of fine table salt is permissible, but too large a quantity is sure to bring complaints. Cans for Lobsters should be thoroughly lined with vegetable parchment paper. After the cans are sealed, they should be bathed for 2 1/2 hours and steam and air exhausted, the blow hole stopped and the can thoroughly cleaned. The packer's license number is to be put on top or bottom, not the side.

SALMON

Fish should be scaled clean, but not washed, cut in lengths and put into cans. Care should be taken to get a small portion of fatty part in each can so that the amount of oil in each can will be the same. If the bone is removed there is less danger of the can becoming blown. Salmon should be bathed for 1 1/2 hours and as this is a very oily fish the cans are apt to become covered with grease, which is easily removed by washing in warm water containing lye. It takes on an average about 75 lbs of round Salmon to fill one case of 48 tins.

CODFISH

Codfish contains a great deal of water, this must be evaporated before the fish is filled into the cans. The easiest way to do this is to boil the fish or steam it until it is thoroughly cooked, the bone and skin is removed and just the pure white meat of the cod is packed in the can. Cans should be filled with 16 oz. of fish and after being sealed should be bathed for one full hour, blown off and closed.

CODFISH TONGUES

Codfish Tongues are canned in the same way as Codfish, a little salt may be added to both of these.

HALIBUT AND TUNA FISH

Halibut and Tuna fish are canned in the same manner as Salmon and do not require to be boiled as Codfish.

CAPLIN

This is rather a difficult fish to handle, as the meat is so very tender that it is apt to go to pieces. Probably the most successful of canning Caplin is to have a boiler with sufficient Olive Oil or Cotton seed oil to completely cover the caplin when immersed. This oil should be brought to a boil and a wire basket or colander containing the Caplin, which have been previously immersed in the boiling oil. The length of time it should remain in the oil depends upon the quantity cooked at one time, the packers should use their own discretion, the idea of this boiling in oil is to harden the fish. It is the same effect as frying would have, only the fish are not browned. The caplin are removed from the oil by lifting out the basket or colander, but care should be taken not to handle the fish roughly, as they are very easily broken. They are then packed in cans tightly as possible, the can sealed and bathed for one hour. If steam could be used at 10 lb. pressure instead of hot bath the bones would become quite tender and edible.

MEATS

It might be wiser to preserve these in 2 lb. cans, as 1 lb. rarely contains enough for one family. The meat should be cut in small pieces, packed into the can closely, a little water added and enough salt to season, the can sealed and boiled for 2 1/2 hours. Tender meat such as chicken, veal, etc., may not require as long, perhaps 2 hours would be long enough. Chicken and Partridge may be packed in this way. With partridge it is against the law to pack this as a commercial article, but packed for home consumption is allowable. It will be found that the average size bird can be placed in the can whole, after it has been cleaned, heads and legs removed. There is a local market for sea birds, such as Turkeys and Ducks, value about $15.00 to $18.00 per case. Canned Rabbits are also saleable at $10.00 per case. It takes about 30 to 36 Rabbits to fill one case.

VEGETABLES.

Dandelions, Turnip Tops, Cabbage, Carrots, Beet can all be canned to advantage in Newfoundland. The Dandelion, Turnip Tops and Cabbage should be thoroughly cleaned and washed and boiled. The Dandelion and Turnip Tops for 15 minutes, the Cabbage until thoroughly done, the water to be drawn off and the greens put into the cans as solidly as possible. It is not necessary to line the can with paper.

A little salt and water can be added, can sealed, and if the contents are fairly warm after sealing they only require to be bathed for one hour, after which they should be blown off and stopped and cooled as quickly as possible by placing in very cold water.

BERRIES

Blueberries and Bakeapples can be canned in ordinary cans with every degree of success. Other berries

LATEST Salt Rheum Covered Her Race Every Winter

BELFAST, March 18.—Not an inch of Ulster territory will be yielded to Southern Ireland, speakers at Kilkeel Orange meeting last night declared. Harry Mulholland, a member of the Ulster Parliament, son of Lord Dunleath, told a meet of Orangemen had decided to have nothing to do with boundary commission provided for in the Anglo-Irish treaty. "Before we yield an inch of our territory to the rebels they will have to kill twenty or thirty thousand Orangemen," he declared. "If such a thing is attempted, thousands of Orangemen in the colonies will flock to Ulster's aid." Lady Craig, wife of the Premier's recent tour had resulted in determination on his part never to allow an inch of territory "to be sliced from Ulster." Field Marshal Sir Henry Hughes Wilson, who is formulating plans for maintaining order in Ulster, arrived in Belfast to-day from England. Men sentenced recently at Enniskille to long terms of penal servitude in connection with kidnapping raid have begun a hunger strike in Londonderry Jail and in Belfast Sinn Fein prisoners are refusing to exercise.

I used one sample bottle of D.D.D. and one dollar bottle and it cured my face of Salt Rheum. I spent a good many dollars with doctors and other medicines. I was loathed every winter and last winter I had no trouble. My skin was perfectly free from any spot, thanks to D.D.D.

Radical Manifesto to Miners

SYDNEY, N.S., March 17.—Declaring class war was on and urging 1200 miners of Nova Scotia to join in policy of cutting production as the British Empire Steel Corporation could not make profits, J. B. McLachlan, Secretary of District, 26 United miners, issued tonight a manifesto which, it is feared, will have serious effect on the situation in the coal fields. McLachlan is leader of the radical element which voted down the new Montreal agreement between company and miners; executive, McLachlan also addressed an open letter to Premier Murray of Nova Scotia accusing him of the responsibility for death of three children in Glace Bay, who recently died of starvation.

IRISH SOCIETY ANNUAL FETE IS BIGGEST YET OFFER GREETINGS TO GOVERNOR HARRIS

The Benevolent Irish Society had its biggest and most notable parade since its inception 116 years ago yesterday, and the day was in many respects the most interesting celebration of the Irish Patron Saint's birth held for some years.

Headed by President W. J. Higgins and the other officers, the parade left the hall at 9.45 and, going by way of Queen's road, New Gower street and Patrick street, proceeded to St. Patrick's Cathedral, where service was held. Along the route of march some thousands of people stood and witnessed the parade go past.

At the Church High Mass, coral pontifice was sung by Rev. Fr. Sheehan, with Rev. Frs. Carter and Flynn acting as deacon and subdeacon. The Archdeacon, was assisted at the Altar by Rt. Rev. Monsignor MacDermott, Rev. Dr. Kitchin and Rev. E. O'Brien, while Rev. Fr. St. John acted as Master of Ceremonies.

PREACHES FINE SERMON.

The sermon on Ireland's Patron Saint was preached by the Rev. W. McGrath, who taking his text from Eccles. C.44. V. 1-13: "Let us now praise men of renown, and fathers in their generation." He delivered an eloquent and masterly discourse, tracing the history of the Irish people from the era of their conversion to Christianity in the 5th century down to the present day, when the sun of freedom is again rising over the people of the Emerald Isle.

He pointed to the persistent persecution which the Irish people suffered for their steadfastness to the faith of their fathers implanted by St. Patrick, who, escaping from his captors who had held him in bondage, returned again to Ireland no longer the unwilling slave of men but the eager and zealous missionary of the Most High God ready to suffer all things for the immortal souls for whom Christ's blood was shed. The centuries following the coming of St. Patrick is a history of thousands of saints and many thousands of famous teachers of Ireland. At this period Christianity and culture were being threatened by the wave of barbarism that swept like a blight over the rest of Europe. In Ireland learning and Christianity went hand in hand. "To Ireland," says Prof. Goerres, the famous philosopher, "the afflicted spirit of truth had flown during the Gothic irruptions in Europe and there made its abode in safety until Europe returned to repose when those hospitable philosophers who had given it an asylum were called by Europe to restore its effulgent light over her be-darkened forests."

Such was Ireland in that great epoch of her career and what of Ireland to-day. Of this we feel sure that the faith of Ireland preserved at such an awful price during centuries of suffering and persecution has yet a part to play in the future of a dark and dreary world. If a return to re-jected Christianity be the hope of an almost homeless world then the Chris-tianity of Ireland will be for her an effective safeguard against those ills that afflict the world, an antidote to that pagan influence that has been so long at work to undermine the reli-gious morality and happiness of the human race. Ireland is not yet free although a great and for the presen-t satisfactory step has been taken to-wards that freedom.

We know that the sun that is now setting on the unhappy Ireland of the past will rise over a new and free and glorious Ireland of to-morrow and the world that shuts its eyes on the past may look to the Ireland of the very near to-morrow and learn wherein lies the secret of Ireland's national strength and the hope of its own re-generation.

GO TO GOVERNMENT HOUSE.

After Mass the Society proceeded via Water and Cochrane streets to Gov-ernment House, where the President extended greetings to His Excellency the Governor, making particu-lar reference to the condition of affairs in "Dear Old Erin" now and twelve short months since. Then when the So-ciety paid their respects all was not right, reprisals were going on and bloodshed was rampant. To-day the scene was changed, Ireland had taken on a new lease of life, and her-ture was very bright.

President Higgins further remark-ed on the great and personal inter-est His Majesty King George had displayed towards the Irish cause, which tended in a great measure to influence British politicians who for many years were largely responsible for keeping Ireland in a state of turmoil, which he hoped was now ended for ever. President Higgins also referred to the great interest His Excellency and Lady Harris had taken in the work of the B.I.S. and its many charitable and educational activities and regretted that their stay here would shortly be terminating and he assured His Excellency that he had the best wishes of the Society. In conclusion he wished to state that it was the first occasion that on their annual visit to Government House the Society had brought their tri-colour, as to-day the C.L.B., M.G.B., and C.C.C. were with them and all united in a common cause. Mr. Higgins then called for three cheers which were heartily given.

GOVERNOR REPLIES.

His Excellency, in a very brief re-ply, thanked the Society for their wholehearted greetings, and paid a tri-bute to the splendid work of the So-ciety in the cause of education. He also thanked them for their personal reference to himself and Lady Harris and complimented the Society on their very fine appearance.

On leaving Government House the parade proceeded to the Aula Maxima at St. Bonaventure's College where it was received by His Grace the Arch-bishop and Rt. Rev. Monsignor Mc-Dermott. The President extended the best wishes of the Society to His Grace. The Archbishop addressed the members thanking them for their very good wishes and in his usual gracious and eloquent manner referred to the Society's long existence and of its splendid loyalty to the Church, and thanked them for their recent gener-ous donation towards the Palace Build-ing Fund. His Grace concluded his remarks by an exceptionally able and concise summary of the present situa-tion in Ireland. He was followed by Rt. Rev. Monsignor MacDermott and Rev. Bro. Enn's, who also spoke briefly with special reference to con-ditions in Ireland.

CHEERED FOR BANDS.

The bands discoursed appropriate music and before leaving, the Presi-dent, at the request of His Grace, called for cheers for the C.L.B. and M.G.B. Bands. From the College the procession returned to St. Patrick's Hall where after the customary votes of thanks had been passed to those who had by their assistance contrib-uted to the success of the event and the reading of congratulatory telegrams from sister Societies in Halifax and Boston the parade disbanded.

HAS AIRPLANE FOUND SEALS? COTTON FLIES OVER ICEFIELDS LANDS, KILLS WHITE COATS

BOTWOOD, Thursday, March 16.—The Martynsyde with Cotton and Stannard, and the Westland with Butler, Bennett and Wireless Oper-ator Heath, flew over the ice this morning and passed over the ships about 12.20. A patrol around the ships was made and the Westland returned to Fogo, waiting the ships' report of the Martynsyde.

The Martynsyde made a further ex-tended patrol and landed near the Sagona about 1.30. She picked up white coats and flippers. Valuable in-formation was gained, and large ex-tended patches were located. The old seals took to the water on ap-proach of the machine whilst the whitecoats were very agitated. Photo-graphs were taken from the air and on the ice. A message was dropped on the Eagle directing to two small local patches, also gave certain in-formation and chart to the Neptune.

The Martynsyde rejoined the West-land, and both machines arrived at Botwood at 4 p.m.

It will be well for owners and gov-ernment to take action before it is too late to obtain information for this year's voyage. The airmen are con-fident that they can give the position of enough seals to load the ships.

PRINCESS MARY AND HUSBAND ON THEIR WAY TO WESTON PARK

Great Welcoming Celebration at Village of Shifnal When Happy Couple Arrived — Prominent Canadians Were Guests at The Westminster Abbey Ceremony.

LONDON, February 28.—Princess Mary's "honeymoon special" left London with the bride and bridegroom for Shifnal, Shropshire, at 4 o'clock this afternoon.

The railway officials arranged for a non-stop journey and the 136 miles were covered at an average speed of between 50 and 60 miles an hour, the train only slowing down at important centres to let the crowds obtain a fleeting glimpse of the couple.

"Princess Mary" is the name of the locomotive assigned to draw the train, which consists of the Queen's saloon and two other carriages from the royal train. There were no other occupants on board the train except the couple's maid and valet, and railway officials.

The little village of Shifnal was densely packed with visitors and sightseers from surrounding districts and the station was gaily decorated. The youngest "Mary" in Shifnal presented a bouquet to the Princess when she alighted from the train.

Along the five mile route from the Shifnal station to Weston Park, residence of the Earl of Bradford, where the couple will spend the first part of their honeymoon, a guard of honor formed of ex-service men was stationed.

A suite of rooms in Weston Hall has been set aside especially for the couple's use. The Princess' boudoir is finished in sage green and gold and contains much old china, principally Dresden.

DOMINIONS THERE.

LONDON, Feb. 28.—Princess Mary's wedding was a memorable event in the lives of dozens of distinguished Canadians and chosen citizens from the outlying dominions. Lord Shaughnessy fittingly represented the Canadian Government in the absence of the High Commissioner.

Lady Shaughnessy wore a gown of taupe chiffon, embroidered with lace, and a hat with a large feather matching a moleskin wrap.

The Hon. Marguerite Shaughnessy wore a brown and blue maroon crepe gown embroidered in white, a blue hat with feather and blue cloak with soft grey collar.

The Duchess of Devonshire was attired in gold tissue and wore an aspreys hat and sables.

Lady Patricia Ramsay wore a gold toque with drooping ospreys and a shimmering dress matching a dark kolinsky wrap with a touch of gold.

Lady Rachel Cavendish, one of the bridesmaids, about whose own marriage gossip has been busy since her return from Canada, wore a dress of silver with lace of tissue veil.

Colonel Pelletier represented Quebec. Madame Pelletier wore a black maroon crepe dress with steel girdle, a wrap of royal blue trimmed with ermine and a black picture hat.

Lady Nanton wore a copper-colored georgette gown embroidered with brown beads, a wrap of gold and gold brocade hat.

WINDERMERE.

MINISTERS WERE RESPLENDENT

LONDON, Feb. 28.—Lloyd George, in knee breeches and the gold-spangled uniform of a Privy Counsellor was a prominent figure at the Abbey.

Other cabinet members wore this costume, except Arthur Balfour and Winston Churchill, who went as "Elder Erethra of Trinity House" in naval uniform.

Arthur Henderson, the Labor leader, in a morning coat, was in contrast to his neighbors. Mrs. Henderson wore a simple black dress.

CANADIANS WELL PLACED

LONDON, Feb. 28.—Those Canadians who were fortunate enough to have seats in Westminster Abbey for the wedding of Princess Mary and Viscount Lascelles today were nearly all placed in the nave, where the seats were arranged tier above tier on either side of the central aisle along which the procession of Royalties, and finally the bride with her father, passed. These seat-holders obtained an excellent view both of the arrival and departure of all the members of the wedding party. The intervention of the organ screen at the entrance of the choir, however, prevented them from witnessing anything if the actual marriage ceremony, although, of course, they were able to enjoy the beautiful music to "the full, and they even caught, faintly, the tones of the Archbishop and other dignitaries in the solemnization of the service.

As representing Canada, Lord Shaughnessy, with Lady Shaughnessy and the Hon. Marguerite Shaughnessy, occupied a more prominent place near the lectern and consequently not far from the sanctuary. The great majority of the distinguished guests entered the Abbey through the north transept, their arrival consequently being unnoticed by the people situated in the body of the Abbey.

The sturdy figure of Premier Lloyd George was easily discerned in the gathering, and remarks were pressed to the hair having become noticeably grayer during the past few years. Right Hon. A. J. Balfour, Lord President of the Council, with his customary affability fell upon him, was conspicuous as he smilingly made his way to his allotted seat. Former Premier H. H. Asquith, white haired, but full of color in his countenance was not far from the Premier. Right Hon. Bonar Law, looking much better than for some time past, showed considerable interest in his surroundings.

Queen Alexandra, as vivacious as ever, was followed into the Abbey immediately by the Mistress of the Robes, the Duchess of Devonshire.

Queen Mary cordially greeted the bridegroom on reaching the sanctuary, as did the other members of the Royal Family, who arrived with Her Majesty.

Congratulatory telegrams were received by hundreds from Canada at Buckingham Palace.

PELTED WITH RICE.

When they were leaving Buckingham Palace to go to the station the bride and bridegroom were vigorously pelted with rice and confetti by King George and others of the Royal Family.

After their stay at Weston Park, the residence of the Earl of Bradford, they will proceed to Florence, spending a day in Paris on the way, with British Ambassador to France. They intend to travel incognito. It will be Princess Mary's first visit either to Paris or to Italy.

Tonight will be a festive night in London. Many parties, dances and dinners have been arranged in honor of the Princess, and the whole West End planned a round of merry-making in celebration of the day's events.

LONDON, Feb. 28.—Rain had fallen throughout the night, seeming to bear out the gloomy forecasts of the weather experts, but the morning broke brightly, the heavy rain clouds scurrying across the sky before a strong west wind.

The sun shone brilliantly as the various sections of the wedding procession started for the Abbey.

THE HONEYMOON

WESTON PARK, Shropshire, Eng., Feb. 28.—(By David L. Blumenfeld, United Press Staff Correspondent.)—The honeymoon nest, where Viscount Lascelles and his bride, Princess Mary, will spend the first few days of their wedded life is ready for them here.

The magnificent estate of the Earl and Viscountess Bradford, famed for its oaks, its Holbeins, its Spanish treasure chests and its Egyptian sheep, will be the first home of the couple. Here, in comparative privacy, they will spend a week or two before

Famous Margot Talks Of Flappers and On Suffrage

Wife of Former Prime Minister Arrives in Montreal to Lecture.

DOESN'T LIKE TRAINS.

Accuses American Reporters of Putting Words in Her Mouth.

Mrs. Margot Asquith, much-discussed wife of Britain's ex-Prime Minister, arrived in Montreal this morning suffering keenly from the exigencies of railway travel in the United States and Canadian and from the imagination of American newspaper reporters.

The trains, she says, give her a commission of the brain; there is no privey and often she could not get her tea.

The reporters, she remarks, made her say that the women of the United States were painted playthings, which resulted in cancellation of bookings for her lectures; and she and Queen Mary smoked cigarettes together.

Mrs. Asquith talked over her experiences since coming to America on her lecture with a Star reporter at the Ritz Carlton this morning.

BOISH LOOKING.

The author of "The Autobiography of Margot Asquith" is not quite what one might imagine her to be from her photographs. Reclining on a couch with the easy grace of a boy she smoked her after-breakfast cigarette—smoked too in an artistic and discriminating way with the fine appreciation of a connoisseur, she wore a grey knitted sports dress which moulded the figure closely and had not an inch of superfluous fullness, and a close fitting mole fur hat with a large coquettish black silk bow on one side, which showed to advantage her small face with its clear-cut features. Her thick curly hair, not very grey, peeped out under the brim and a long curl which had detached itself during her vigorous comments hung over one shoulder in the style of a past generation. Her stockings were of thick white silk and her shoes were black suede pumps with small brilliant buckles.

She spoke with ease and frankness in the low well-modulated voice for which she is noted. Occasionally she got up to speak to her secretary and her walk at once attracted attention. Mrs. Asquith walks with a sinuous grace, swaying slightly from the hips. FELT LIKE SHRIMP.

"How did you get on at Toronto?" she was asked.

"I had an immense audience," she replied smiling. "The hall must have held about 7,000. I felt like a shrimp on a Dreadnought. The people heard every word too. My voice is marvelous. Sometimes after a meeting my throat is so sore that I can hardly speak, but in a short time it is all right again."

Mrs. Asquith admits to strenuous days. "I have tea at 5.30 every morning, never later," she said. "I write until 11 o'clock and attend to my letters. I never have less than 100 letters a day. You would be amazed. I don't want to appear to flatter myself, but they are full of praise, and the writers ask to be allowed to send me flowers, send me books, candy and want to shower every kindness on me. I cannot tell you how much kindness has been showered on me over here, and how warm-hearted the people are. At Toronto they stormed the platform after the meeting."

Mrs. Asquith spoke with great affection and pride of her family and got photographs of each member to show. These accompany her everywhere on her journeys. Every day, whatever her engagements, she writes to her husband, to her daughter Elizabeth, Princess Bibesco and her son Anthony.

"My daughter Elizabeth, my sister, Mrs. Graham Smith, and my step-daughter, Lady Bonham Carter, are my three greatest women friends," she says. "Generally I prefer men to women. Women are more gossipy." Mrs. Asquith spoke sadly of the fact that of her five children only two have lived.

WOMEN IN POLITICS.

Regarding women in politics, Mrs. Asquith, though having a step-daughter, Mrs. Bonham Carter, whom she herself characterized as the most brilliant woman speaker in England and who had been approached by nine constituencies to stand for Parliament, does not consider that women will have political careers in the same sense as men.

"It is too early yet," she says, "to say whether women M.P.'s are going to be a success in England."

She did not think Lady Astor had made a great name for herself in the House of Commons. Anyone with money could get in at Plymouth, she said. The next lady member to get in, Mrs. Wintingham, was a delightful woman, but she had only recently been elected and it was too early to say anything yet.

The election of 1918, Mrs. Asquith considered, indicated the feeling about women in politics. Many thought that women like Mrs. Pankhurst and other able women then prominent, would be elected, but it was not so. As to whether women possessed the qualities to make statesmen, it was much too early to judge.

Mrs. Asquith confessed that before the war she and her husband had been very much against votes for women, but the splendid work done by women in the war had caused them both to change their minds.

"Only God and fools never change," she quoted. She and her husband had, however, been the mark of the militants during their campaign. "We were pursued with hate and venom," she said, "and our two little children had to be guarded by detectives in the nursery. They even had stones thrown at them through the nursery window. The reporters in the United States got hold of this story and reported that one of my children had been killed by the stones of the militants. If one of my children had been killed (the world would have known it. But the children were badly frightened."

THE MODERN GIRL.

"Do you join in the condemnation of the modern girl which one hears everywhere?"

"I have not seen her yet over here. In England the girls of to-day are delightful and worked marvellously, the daughters of the most aristocratic families scrubbing floors and doing everything possible to help. But this talk of flappers! When I hear the word flapper I put my hands over my ears and say 'Oh, spare me that!' Why do you fill your papers with flappers and crimes? Why not write about something interesting? In England we have some bad papers, of course, but we have some really great papers and such would not even mention flappers. Papers over here are pulling them to pieces one day and praising them the next."

Such prominence to young girls, Mrs. Asquith thought, very undesirable.

Discussing her reported smoking with Queen Mary, Mrs. Asquith remarked: "Of course I would never dream of saying such a ridiculous thing. I had to write to the Queen at once and say there was absolutely no foundation for such a report. I have smoked with Queen Alexandra, with whom I have had a friendship lasting over many years."

COMMENT ON SMOKING.

They always commented on my smoking cigarettes, as if smoking were not an everyday thing. If I had smoked a clay pipe—now, say something really clever about that. I never say anything clever, you know."

Mrs. Asquith is at present engaged on the second volume of her memoirs. "The first ended with my marriage, you remember," she said. "My second book is in England, where I am returning on the first of April for my boy's holidays from school."

Her stay in Montreal will be brief, for tomorrow she goes on to Ottawa, then to New York, where she will

As a parting word, Mrs. Asquith admitted that she liked men interviewers better than women. She had been much interviewed and she preferred the men's versions to the women's.

Duke Braves Death For American Wife

WOUNDS SCULPTOR-COUNT AFTER 18 MINUTES FURIOUS DUELLING.

ROME, Feb. 24.—(United Press).—The honor of Duchess Torlonia, formerly Elsie Moore, of Connecticut, was avenged on the field of honor here yesterday, when her husband, the Duke, wounded Count Filippo Lovatelli, after eighteen minutes of furious duelling.

The affair of honor, one of the first to be known publicly here since duelling went out of fashion, stirred Rome society. The Duke had engaged the count, who is a sculptor, to make a bas relief of his wife, who was the daughter of the late Charles Moore, a New England manufacturer.

The count asked for advance payment when the marble was half completed. The Duke replied that the bas relief was not worth much, and sent one thousand lire, pleading the high cost of living.

Indignant, the count placed a purse marked "1,000 lire" in the hand of his bas-relief of the duchess and added the ducal arms, with an English inscription of his own invention: "I have my money."

This marble he exhibited in his studio.

The duke met the count at the benefit ball to raise funds for the Anglo-American hospital in Rome, and punched him in the nose in the best Bowery style.

A challenge to a duel followed, and the gallants met at dawn yesterday in the prescribed manner.

It was no mock duel.

After five furious assaults by the outraged duke, he succeeded in pinkening his adversary in the arm, and stalked from the field to tell the duchess.

Winter Aviation In Newfoundland Is Very Useful

Cotton and Bennett Face And Overcome Difficulties

(By J. R. SMALLWOOD, in the Newtaking off from and landing on deep and uneven snow, often snow banks ten feet deep.)

ST. JOHN'S, N.F., Feb. 20.—Hunting seals by airplane is the thrilling job that is being performed in Newfoundland this winter by F. Sidney Cotton, Australian airman.

The seals come down on great pans of ice with the Arctic current to the Newfoundland coast regularly every March, and nearly a dozen specially constructed ships fit out in St. John's, capital port of the island, and proceed to the great fields of ice where the seals swarm by thousands and hundreds of thousands, and the crews of the ships, called "sealers," engage for two or three weeks in a slaughter of the "whitecoats." The ships are loaded, often to the hatches, or even the gunwales, with the pelts of the seals. On reaching St. John's the several inches of fat is removed from the skins and rendered out for the valuable oil. The skins are dressed for leather, often the furs are stuffed and made into imitation seals. The industry has a turnover of millions of dollars.

But the seals do not come all together. There is what is known as "the main patch," which contains the great bulk of the seals. There are minor pans which have broken off, and also carry seals. If the main patch is missed by the ships it may mean loss for the owners and the men. These men sign on only for the hunt, and are paid by a share in the total catch of the ship. Everything, then, is contingent upon striking the main patch. This is sometimes missed, and sometimes located.

Where the Airplane Comes In.

It is here that the airplane comes in. Major Cotton's plan is to set out from a base at Botwood, on the mainland, fly over the vast icefields, with an experienced sealing captain as observer, and locate the main patch and wireless to the ships.

There may be many miles of thick ice between the ships and the main patch. The airplane scouts around and locates channels in the ice. In this way, according to the plan, the great sealing industry of Newfoundland will be made certain and scientific.

Cotton had many difficulties to overcome. In the first place, it meant winter flying. He was told by aviation experts in England that it could not be done. There was the matter of freezing of the radiator, for instance. Now as he goes to fly in very cold atmosphere without his radiator freezing solid?

Then, how was the plane to take off from the snow? How as he to conquer the gales and snow blizzards of the interior of Newfoundland, not to speak of the icefields, where many ships had come down in storm and many hundreds of sealers had perished.

Flying in Newfoundland in the winter means, often, flying in a temperature 20 degrees below zero. (Fahr.) It means being up in storms and blizzards and gales. It means

No More Frozen Radiators.

The first achievement was the discovery of a liquid that obviated freezing trouble without damaging the engine, and he can now fly in the coldest weather without fear of his radiator freezing. Then he devised a serviceable skid to replace wheels, which are useless in deep snow, and pontoons are useless except in open water. With his skids Cotton can rise from any kind of snow and alight on the roughest and most uneven snow banks. The skids can take the machine safely over ditches, or even logs. A small skid for the tail keeps the airplane completely out of the snow, as both fore and aft skids sink only a few inches into even the stiffest snow.

Cotton has two hangars and a couple of canvas sheds, stationed at various points. One canvas tent has been placed at St. Anthony, away down by the Straits of Belle Isle, by the Labrador coast. There is a hangar at Botwood, midway between the north and south of the country, and one at St. John's. At that, there are not half enough hangars, as all of the interior of the country is uninhabited and exposed to the rigors of winter. A crash there means to be marooned perhaps for weeks, unless it be near the transinsular railway.

The right kind of airplane mechanics have to be brought out from England. In some instances, after paying all expenses, Cotton has found the men unfitted for the work. The hardy, dare-devil type of pioneer mechanic is the type needed for winter flying in Newfoundland, and he is hard to get.

Neither the insurance companies nor the Government will insure Cotton's machines, so that if a machine crashes the loss falls entirely on himself.

Bridging Ice Barriers.

Cotton and his companion in flying, Capt. V. S. Bennett, son of the Newfoundland statesman of that name, have been proving the practicability and usefulness of the airplane in many interesting ways. Their idea is to force the Government and people to see that not only is aviation useful to Newfoundland, but that the future development of Newfoundland depends upon aviation.

Bell Island, the iron-producing rock in Conception Bay, was cut off from the mainland for days by an ice block, one in the bay. The ice was too thin to bear man or horse, and too thick to allow a boat to get through it. For three days the thousands of miners there had been without mails or newspapers. Cotton loaded up his machine with St. John's newspapers and in a very few minutes had dropped them

In the public square on Bell Island, and then circled around and saw the men rush for them and open and read them. This greatly impressed the authorities.

Some steamers were frozen in the ice off the coast some miles from St. John's, it being an unusually hard winter in Newfoundland. They, also, had been without papers or mails. Cotton repeated his stunt and dropped newspapers onto the decks of the steamers, and the passengers were able to read the afternoon papers almost as quickly as citizens of St. John's did. Delivery of newspapers has been made in many places around the shore.

An Object Lesson.

The Norwegian manager of a paper company at Alexander Bay wanted to get down to the plant from St. John's.

The cross-country train was snowed in somewhere near the line. Cotton took Blakstad, the manager, to his place at an hour and three-quarters, at the same time dropping newspapers on the passengers in the marooned train.

Special Machines Needed.

The machines being used by Major Cotton are a Martinsyde, with a 275 Falcon Rolls-Royce engine, and a

D. H. 9. The former is the same type used by the first men to come to Newfoundland in connection with the trans-Atlantic flight. Both machines have a very quick take-off and land very slowly. Then there is a Westland limousine, with a 450 Napier engine, particularly useful in case of crash, as the aviators can live in the cabin in comparative comfort. Concentrated food for a month for two, snowshoes, blankets, &c., are always carried in each machine. Neither of these machines is suitable for the conditions of the country, however, and on his return to England Cotton will have some specially designed for the work, putting into them everything that he has learned while here.

Aviators in all parts of the world are watching with a great deal of interest Cotton's activities in winter flying in Newfoundland.
